

M.K. DAV Public School Daltonganj Observes Ved Prachar Saptah with Vedic Wisdom and Environmental Consciousness***

As per the directives of the Arya Pradeshik Pratinidhi Sabha , Ved Prachar Saptah was observed at the Institution from 22nd to 28th August 2026 . Each day introduced students to a distinct facet of Vedic thought through Havan, explanatory sessions, plantation, community outreach and artistic expression. The observance sought to acquaint the young minds with the timeless wisdom of the Vedas and its relevance to contemporary life.

*22nd August – Vedic Wisdom and Nature

The week commenced with a Havan in which offerings were made while reciting mantras from the Rigveda . The verses related to Nature were explained to the students helping them understand the Vedic view of the world as a source of noble thoughts and wisdom. The message from the Rigveda, “आ नो भद्राः क्रतवो यन्तु विश्वतः” — “May noble thoughts come to us from every side,” conveyed the timeless Vedic invitation to remain receptive to wisdom from all directions. The day thus encouraged students to view Nature with greater awareness and to appreciate the wisdom that surrounds human life.

23rd August – Vedic Thought and Human Values

The second day featured Havan and offerings accompanied by Samaveda mantras. Their explanations acquainted the students with the significance of cultivating noble and wholesome thoughts. The session drew attention to the role of a pure mind in shaping one’s conduct and outlook. The Vedic prayer “भद्रं नो अपि वातय मनः” — “O Lord, inspire our minds with auspicious and benevolent thoughts” conveyed a simple yet profound message 'a virtuous mind guides an individual towards a better way of life'.

24th August – Yajna and Sanskar

The third day continued with Havan using mantras from the Yajurveda . The explanations centred on Vedic yajna and sanskar acquainting students with their significance in Indian tradition. The session brought forth the idea that rituals acquire greater worth when their underlying values are understood. The Vedic teaching “इदं न मम” — “This is not for me” — suggested the spirit of offering and selflessness associated with yajna.

*25th August – Ayurveda and Healing

The fourth day featured Havan with mantras from the Atharvaveda , followed by an explanation of their connection with Ayurveda and healing . Students were introduced to the Vedic view of health and the healing power associated with medicinal knowledge. The Atharvaveda mantra “यद् वो भेषजं तद् नो अस्तु” — “May the healing power of medicines be with us” conveyed the prayer for health and well-being and reminded students of the value of Nature’s healing gifts.

26th August – A Tribute to Mother Earth

The ecological dimension of the week gained a tangible expression through a Sapling Plantation Drive . Students planted Mango, Jamun, Jackfruit and Neem trees giving the Vedic message of reverence for Nature a living form. The Rig Veda mantra “या ओषधीः पूर्वा जाता देवेभ्यस्त्रियुगं पुरा । मनै नु बभ्रूणामहं शतं धामानि सप्त च ॥” speaks of the ancient medicinal plants and their many forms. The mantra thus connected the plantation activity with the Vedic appreciation of the healing and life-giving wealth found in Nature.

27th August – Vedic Message Beyond the School

An Awareness Rally was organised through the nearby villages to spread the message of environmental care. Students reached out to the local community and encouraged people to value and protect the natural resources that sustain life. The Vedic verse “सङ्गच्छध्वं संवदध्वं सं वो मनांसि जानताम्” — “Walk together, speak together, let your minds move in harmony” added a spirit of unity to the initiative, reminding everyone that caring for Nature becomes more effective when people come together with a common understanding.

28th August – Vedic Thought Through Art

The concluding day featured an Inter-House Poster Making Competition on the theme “Concept of Nature Care Found in Vedas.” Students expressed their understanding of Vedic ideas on Nature through imaginative artwork and turned their thoughts into visual messages of environmental care. The Vedic verse “विश्वकर्मन् हविषा वावृधानः स्वयं यजस्व पृथिवीमुत द्याम्” invoked the creative spirit of Vishwakarma, the Divine creator, inspiring students to use creativity as a means of shaping their surroundings and spreading awareness. The activity brought the week to a close by connecting Vedic thought with artistic expression and care for the Earth. In the competition, Ishani Kumari of VII F secured the First Rank, Vaibhavi Arya of VII F stood Second while Arnav Pandey of VII B and Samagya Sharma of VII C jointly secured the Third Rank.

The Honourable Principal, MRS. INDRANI CHATTERJEE, appreciated the manner in which the week introduced students to different dimensions of Vedic wisdom. She observed that the Vedas contain profound insights into the human relationship with Nature and the responsibilities that accompany it. She expressed satisfaction that the observance went beyond ceremonial practice by giving students opportunities to understand ancient ideas through participation and outreach. She encouraged the students to imbibe the spirit of selfless giving in their lives and to recognise that caring for Nature is also an expression of gratitude towards the source that sustains us.
